1st. That we have heard with profound sorrow of the death of our fellow member and former president, William R. Trigs. In his death this community has lost a loyal citizen, the Commonwealth Club a devoted zealous and much belowed member and each of us a cherished friend. With characteristic energy he threw his whole soul into his official connection with tals club as its president, and no member has done more to inspire its members with gentle courtesy and kindly consideration for each other.

vote was: "Wets," 212; "drys," 106. The vote in the districts was as follows: Arllington, "wets," 120; "drys," 69. Washington, "wets," 92; "drys," 37.

The temperance people in the county some time ego started a movement to do away with the saloons in these two districts in the county. The liquor men nut up an equally hard fight for their continuance, and the above vote shows conclusively that the residents of that county prefer to have the saloon men continue. The liquor men pointed out that to revoke their license would mean a big loss in the revenue of the county, and they further pointed out that it would necessarily culminate in an increase of taxes in these two districts in order to maintain the county roads.

A RECOLLECTION.

Editor of The Times-Displach:
Sir,-Will you allow me to contribute a few lines to the memory of William R. Trigg, During the Exposition, which was held at the "fair grounds," known to old timers as "Camp Lee," I, as a newspaper man, who was writing up the exhibits, met Mr. Trigg, who had on exhibition a locomotive made at the Richmond Locomotive Works. In the course of our conversation he remarked, Do you know that I thought that the North had some ways and means of making things that we could not make in the South? I have found that with skilled men and means we can make anything in Iron that they can make. Result-a few years thereafter the Trigg Shipbuilding Company was building vessels for the greatest government on earth with less voltage to deep water than we ever had.

Hon. S. S. P. Patteson and Col. Anderson Say it Would Enhance Value of Property.

Evidently public interest is growing in favor of the proposed law to put the Torrens system of registering land into effect in Virginia, and nearly every citizen who is familiar with its provisions on the announcement of the death of Mr. William R. Trigg, for twelve years a director of the institution.

Mr. Trigg was not only an active director, but when the Bank was started as a Savings Bank, was chief bookkeeper, and later on eashier, and throughout his acres and useful life was a friend to the institution and to all convected with it. It will be recalled that the bill was of-fered some time age in the House by Hon. David H. Leake, of Goochland, and Hon. David Hr Leake, of Goochland, and is now pending before the House Committee for Courts of Justice. Bills on this line have been offered at nearly every session for several years, but have either died in committee or been defeated. Friends of the measure contend that this is due to the fact that the public has never sufficiently understood the new departure to approbale its advantages. Most of the lawyers and persons accustomed to the frequent transfer of property, are in favor of the bill, and say it active and useful life was a friend to the institution and to all connected with it. He was well informed on all matters of finance and banking, and represented this Bank at the convention of the American Bankers' Association at Cleveland, O., and made a notable speech, and was elected vice-president from Virginia. He represented the Clearing House Association and Chamber of Commerce as the member from Virginia of the Monetary Commission, and his address before the Finance Committee of the House of Representatives on Banking and Currency is regarded as an able presentation of the subject of free banking.

In the more important positions as manager of the Richmond and West Point Terminal Company, president of erty, are in favor of the bill, and say it would be of great advantage to the State would be of great advantage to the State if adopted.

The principle has been acted upon favorably by the State Bar Association and has been carnestly advocated by several leading lawyers here and elsewhere in the State for many years.

"I have no doubt the Torrens system of registering land is a good one," said Hen. S. S. P. Patteson last night, "and I believe if put into operation it would enhance the value of real estate in Virginia. Point Terminal Company, president of the Richmond Locomotive Works, and of the William R. Trigg Ship Building Com-pany, he remained a director, and let no opportunity pass to further the interest of this institution.

of this institution. His courage and genial nature, coupled with the long association, has so endeared him to all connected with the Bank that the sonse of personal loss is peculiarly keen and heartfelt. Therefore, be it Resolved, That in the death of our friend and associate, there has passed away an active, high-spirited and useful citizen, devoted with all his soul to the "I am heartily in favor of the system," said Senator George Wayne Anderson, "and will support it with great pleasure if it comes to the Senate for action. As I understand it, the Torrens system has advantages over the present one in Virginia, and when once a piece of property is so registered there can never be any more trouble about the title. A man may take his real estate then and negotiate it as he would a bond, and in doing away with the cumbersome, uncertain mode now in vogue and supplanting it with the Torrens system, I have no doubt the value of real estate, generally speaking, would be enhanced." citizen, devoted with all his soul to the interest of his State and city, and with ability to serve both, and that they have been served in a manner unusual is in proof from he facts that more high-priced proof from he facts that more high-priced labor has been employed for ten years in this city than has ever before been employed through the exertion of one man, and that the city in its manufacturing interests has received through his exertions a stimulus that will centinue to be felt in the years to follow.

Resolved, That we beg to sympathize with his family in the less they have sustained in the death of this example to all men of what a husband and father ought to be-genial and charming, and whose
